

EVACUATION DAY.

Serious Accident to General Paes—His Condition Very Critical—Arrival of the First Division of New York Militia—The Troops Reviewed by Governor King.

On the 25th of November, 1858, the British forces, which had occupied the city of New York during most of the Revolutionary war, sailed from the Battery, and surrendered the city to the American arms. This event has made the day memorable for all time, and the old fashioned Gothamites used to celebrate its annual return with great zest. There were military parades, the firing of guns, ringing of joy bells, public feasts and other demonstrations, to show the delight of the New Yorkers on the anniversary of the evacuation.

When the British ran away. It is not so long ago when there used to be a public exhibition on Evacuation Day, in front of the City Hall, of the coat, sword and writing of General Washington. It was considered a rare treat in those days to view those venerable relics, but now practice has fallen in disuse, and not even the transparency in front of the City Hall, representing General Washington, is not now exhibited.

Our military, however, keep up the day unintermittedly, and their parade is the feature of the celebration, which, every succeeding year, becomes more brilliant as the First Division increases in numbers, discipline and general efficiency and appearance; for it is undoubtedly true that our city soldiers were never in a better condition than at present, or presented a more brilliant front when on parade. A few years have made a great change in the better.

From the vessels in our harbor, the hotels and other public buildings the national colors were yesterday displayed from sunrise until sunset. For several years past, on the anniversary of Evacuation Day, the flagstaff on the Battery has been neglected, nor was yesterday, at least for part of the day, an exception. Previously, the patriotic citizens of the much abused ward complained of this omission, when it was discovered that "no one in particular" had charge of the public honor. Now we have the other side of the dilemma. That flag is now in charge of four sergeants and three corporals of the harbor police, who, when applied to in the matter, although bristling with buttons and other patriotic insignia, were perfectly innocent of the fact that this was the anniversary of Evacuation Day; yet the Veteran Corps fired a salute at sunrise, almost at their door.

At sunrise the Veteran Corps fired a salute on the Battery. The First Division assembled yesterday at 10 A. M. in the vicinity of Fourteenth street, under the command of the Major General. It was announced that Governor King and General Paes would review the soldiers in Fourteenth street, and that a large number of the "anemipoly" directed their steps.

The City Troop, First Regiment, under command of Captain Murphy, were deployed to act as the special escort of Gen. Paes. They waited on him at his headquarters in Twenty-sixth street, where he was furnished with a powerful black horse, which he mounted. He then proceeded towards the Parade Ground to meet Governor King, but at the corner of Broadway and Twelfth street he met with an accident, which was at first supposed to be trifling, but eventually turned out so serious that there is now some fear for his life.

The pavement was slippery, and the horse stumbled and fell on his right side—the general under him. General Paes, who is an excellent horseman, did not dismount, but remained the horse in and made him rise; but the charger immediately fell again on the left side. A second time he was brought to his feet, when he again slipped and fell on his right side, bringing Gen. Paes's right foot forward to the pavement, and doubling him over. The immediate dismount was such a success, as to be generally able to stand. His spur had been bent double, and pierced his hand, lacerating it considerably; his great toe was also dislocated, and the foot so injured that late in the day it was feared that lockjaw would set in. There was much excitement at the time of the accident, and a large crowd assembled. Manuel Paes, his son, was passing down Broadway at the time of the accident, and seeing his father surrounded by several persons, attempted to approach him, when a thief seized upon young Paes, and in doing so dexterously cut his guard chain and carried off his watch. The general, however, was soon surrounded by sympathizing friends, who conveyed him to the Astor Place Hotel, where, fortunately, St. Peter, one of the Venezuelan Commissioners, is staying. Gen. Paes was immediately put in bed, and physicians sent for. At first it was supposed that the injury was a dislocation of the great toe of the right foot, but he was treated accordingly. The joint was pulled into its place, and it was supposed that it would not amount to much more than a severe sprain. A subsequent examination, however, showed that the hurt was a very severe one, and that the entire foot was injured by being bent under. Several surgeons were called in, and at their advice the injured foot was cut longitudinally under the toe, to let out the bruised blood and reduce the inflammation which was fast setting in. The old General bore the operation with great heroism, smiling the while, although it must have been exceedingly painful. Later in the day hysterics, to which the General is subject, set in, and he became quite delirious. Strangely enough, his mind wandered back to the time when he was fighting for the republic, and he imagined he was again leading his companions to victory.

To-day there will be a crisis in his case. Should the remedial measures adopted yesterday fail, it is feared that the consequences may be fatal, as suppuration, and finally mortification, may supervene. It was feared last night that in any case he would not be able to leave his bed on Saturday. He will remain at the Astor Place Hotel until a change takes place in his symptoms.

During the day Governor King called at the hotel, as did also a number of private citizens, to inquire after the General's health. In fact, from the number of calls it is evident that the public are very anxious to see the General, and that the public for the probable loss of this most unfortunate accident. Thomas Francis Meagher was constant in his attendance at the bedside of the General, and he was the only one who remained in the room after the General had fallen asleep. This accident postponed the parade for nearly an hour. Governor King, as the Commander-in-Chief, was dressed in the complete uniform of a General, and had, as usual, a sword, a cane, and a top hat. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

Governor King and staff, upon arriving on the ground with their escort, the Washington Guard, were received by the City Troop, and the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The parade was deferred to Saturday, when the General was expected to be able to hold, and the enthusiastic plaudits of the young New Yorkers wherever he made his appearance. The first regiment of the City Troop was ordered to the Battery. The right wing rested on Broadway, and the left extended down to Ninth avenue. There were probably some 4,000 men in line, who really presented a most magnificent appearance.

American Geographical and Statistical Society.

TRAVELING ABROAD.

A special meeting of the above Society was held last evening at 10 o'clock, at the residence of the Secretary, Mr. John R. Taylor, at No. 10, West 12th street. The attendance was very large, and the meeting was very interesting. The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The President, Mr. Taylor, presided, and the Secretary, Mr. Taylor, read a paper on "The Geographical and Statistical Society." The paper was very interesting, and the meeting was very successful.

The Telegraphic Chess Match.

The first of the telegraphic chess match between New York and Philadelphia was resumed last evening, when the first game terminated, and resumed, as was expected, in a draw. In all fifty-seven moves were made on both sides, and it must be confessed that from the thirty-first move down, the position of the New Yorkers was extremely dubious, and the slightest error would have been fatal for their well fought chess battle.

At the thirty-first move the Philadelphians had much the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

In popular sense this game has not been a brilliant one, and a few moves on the New Yorkers' side, a few pawns, and the management of the respective kings, so that all the beautiful combinations brought about by the knights and bishops, in conjunction with the other pieces, were lost. But this game, which was a skillful and accurate analysis of a difficult and hazardous position.

To enable chess players to understand the concluding moves, and the management of the game, the conclusion of the game on Monday night, Philadelphia had the best game, and so far as the New Yorkers' analysis went they should have lost. But the New Yorkers made a move which saved them. When the Philadelphians, on the thirty-fourth move, showed their pawn to king's rook file, it was considered as a decided blunder, and the subsequent moves proved that it was by this break in the lines of the Philadelphians that the New Yorkers were enabled to draw the game. The play of the New Yorkers was very good, and the Philadelphians, on the 45th move, were in a very bad position, as, in addition to their own obvious moves, and looked very hazardous. Careful consideration of all the moves, and the management of the game, showed that there were no stronger moves on the board.

The American Smoker for the President.

Progressing as rapidly as possible, the President is expected to be ready for the policy of his message, for we could not get the smoker ready in time, and he will have to wait a few days, when the people may expect some change in the Cabinet, and a policy inaugurated so late, and so sudden, as will have to precede the days of Washington.

French Buck, English Cloth, and Silk. 50 cents per yard, at FULLERTON'S, 301 Broadway.

Geo. Saunders' Metallic Tablet Razor Strop. This genuine article has never been equalled for producing the finest possible edge to a razor. For sale by J. A. S. NICHOLS, No. 100 Broadway.

Tubular Ties—To Wholesale Retailers—Just received per steamer, and for sale by J. A. S. NICHOLS, No. 100 Broadway.

New Styles of English Woolen and Silk. A. RAYMOND & CO., 297 Broadway.

Good Tea, 51 the Chest; Good Coffee, 10 lbs. for $1, at CHRISTIANSON'S, No. 1 Chambers street.

Parties Furnished. AT THE SHORTEST NOTICE. H. MALLORY, 100 Broadway.

English Silk Scarves—300 Dozen Just Received per steamer, retailing at $1.50, at H. MALLORY, 100 Broadway.

Winter Underclothes and Drawers—A Large Stock, at H. MALLORY, 100 Broadway.

A New Lot of English Scarves, 51 Each—Also, Scotch wool plaid, at the shirt and collar shop, 51 and 59 William street, one door north of the City Hall.

Boys' Winter Clothing. In great variety. D. L. CORSE, 100 Broadway.

Ladies' Gaiters and Boots, with Heels, 13th Street, 100 Broadway.

A Great Benefactor in White Teeth—Produced by THURSTON'S tooth powder.

Married. FORD—On Tuesday, Nov. 23, at St. Paul's church, Morrisania, by the Rev. James G. Appleton, Mr. Thomas Ford, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Funeral—On Wednesday, Nov. 24, at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. GELBERG, Mr. FORD, of Fordham, to Miss HENRIETTA S. STOKES, of Morrisania.

Brooklyn Canoe-Trip—Fair or Cloudy.

The excursionists required by WILLIAMSON'S Boat, for a comfortable trip.

White, the Hatter, Headquarters No. 243 Greenwich street, corner of Hoffman. Ladies' risk for $15 fur coats.

The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table. When in want of a subject for his dinner, visit No. 243 Greenwich street, corner of Hoffman.

Warm Underclothes for Gentlemen—Hosiery, gloves, scarves, traveling trunks, etc., at low prices. FULLERTON'S, 301 Broadway.

Six Hundred Dozen. WEST SCOTCH WOOL SHIRTS, FIVE CENTS EACH. TWO HUNDRED DOZEN SILK SCARVES.

One Hundred Thousand Dollars Worth of MAGNIFICENT FURS. KEVIN'S NEW FUR ROOM, 207 Broadway, St. Nicholas Hotel.

See Advertisement of Auction Sale of Oil paintings by JOHN LEVINSON, 281 Broadway.

Five Shirts, Made to Order from the Best materials, sewed by hand, warranted to suit. FULLERTON'S, 301 Broadway.

The American Smoker for the President. Progressing as rapidly as possible, the President is expected to be ready for the policy of his message, for we could not get the smoker ready in